Director of Advancement Services

BIOGRAPHY

"I started my career as a parole officer where I saw firsthand the long-lasting impact that failing to finish school and making poor choices can have. This observation inspired me to enter the field of education. As a school counselor, I was able to reach students who would have otherwise slipped through the cracks. School counselors see and work with the whole child, helping them to develop coping skills that will assist them throughout life. There is no greater calling or profession."

Dr. Hartline entered the field of education in 1991 after serving as a parole officer and discovering that over 85% of her caseload had not completed high school. She wanted to be a proactive part of the solution and reach young people before they made life-altering choices so she became a teacher. After teaching for seven years, she found her true calling as a school counselor. Julie served as the chair of the Campbell High School counseling department for 14 years where her department became the first high school in Georgia to receive the Recognized ASCA Model Program (RAMP) award from the American School Counselor Association in 2008. While at Campbell, she was named the 2009 ASCA School Counselor of the Year, and she earned her doctorate in Professional Counseling and Supervision in 2011 with her dissertation, "Training School Counselors to Close the Achievement Gap."

In 2012, Julie became the School Counseling Consultant for the Cobb County School District where she helped to supervise approximately 300 school counselors in implementing comprehensive, data-driven school counseling programs for five years, coaching over 30 schools through the RAMP process. During that time, she also served as the 2014-2015 Georgia School Counselor Association President and was actively involved in changing Georgia legislation, certification and policy impacting school counseling. Julie taught future school counselors as a Clinical Assistant Professor at the University of North Florida from 2017 - 2020 until she joined the Hatching Results team in a more dedicated role. She is the co-author of The Use of Data in School Counseling, second edition.

TESTIMONIALS

If you are ever so fortunate as to get the opportunity to work with Julie Hartline, please go for it! She's witty, so knowledgeable, and completely dedicated to helping counselors help students. For three years she trained the counselors in our district—walking us through the ASCA National Model. Because of this training, our school decided to RAMP. Without her assistance, her heart for students, her patience, and her time (very valuable), we would never have received the RAMP award! Thanks, Julie, you're the best!
